Institution Narrative and Consecration

You will notice some word changes to this central part of the Eucharistic prayer. The word chalice replaces the word “cup” (as in the current Irish language text) and eternal replaces everlasting. The new translation also replaces the phrase for all with the phrase for many, translating the Latin pro multis. This is not intended to imply that God’s love is limited or that Christ did not die on the cross for all men and women. Rather, in translating the Latin and the Greek of the Gospels, it also acknowledges that human beings may choose to accept in faith the gift of salvation that is being offered.

Memorial Acclamation

The introduction to the memorial acclamation is now simply the words “The mystery of Faith” – a straightforward translation of the Latin text. The 1975 Missal gave us five acclamations, including My Lord and My God which was included “for Ireland only”. In the new edition of the Missal for Ireland we find four acclamations Christ has died...and Dying you destroy our death...were both based upon. These familiar acclamations do not appear as they are not direct translations of the Latin. Also Christ has died...contains statements about Christ rather than. more suitably, being addressed to Christ. There is almost no change in the second acclamation (When we eat this Bread...) and in the third acclamation (now beginning, Save us, Saviour of the world) there is a change to the current word order. The acclamation My Lord and my God is included for Ireland. New Mass settings have been composed to take account of the changes to the texts.

The new responses which are being used at Mass are available on cards in our Churches. We ask you to please leave the cards on your seats after Mass.
