Doxology

The Eucharistic Prayer concludes with the Doxology and the people's response Amen. The doxology will sound slightly different as it will follow more closely the original word order of the Latin. The people's assent, Amen, remains the Great Amen!

Behold the Lamb of God

...Lord, I am not worthy that you should enter under my roof
But only say the word and I shall be healed.

The invitation to Communion begins with the priest taking the host and holding it raised above the paten or above the chalice. The new translation captures more the biblical wording of John 1:29 and Revelations 19:9: Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sins of the world. Blesses are those called to the supper of the Lamb. The use of Blessed rather than Happy is a stronger reflection of its biblical root and highlights that there is a significant difference between being "blessed" and being "happy". The priest and people respond together: Lord, I am not worthy that you should enter under my roof, but only say the word and my soul shall be healed. Again this translates fully the Latin text in the Missal, which is taken from the response of the Centurion to Jesus at Capernaum (Matthew 8:9), substituting "My Soul" for "my servant". The response "under my roof" may be confusing when we first hear it but it makes more sense when we are aware of its biblical roots.

Changes to the texts within the Concluding Rite

Prayer over the People / Solemn Blessing

People may hear a change of style in these prayers. All of these formal blessings have been translated to follow more closely the original Latin text.

The Dismissal

While the response of the people will not change, the priest (or deacon) will have several new options for the words of dismissal. These options were particularly requested by Pope Benedict XVI for inclusion in the Missal and very much capture the sense of the faithful being sent to live what they have celebrated, for example, Go in peace, glorifying the Lord by your life.

The new responses which are being used at Mass are available on cards in our Churches. We ask you to please leave the cards on your seats after Mass.
