Not to be served, but to serve

What we remember most in anyone's life, is not so much what they achieved, but the love in which they lived.

Jesus himself is remembered more for his death out of love for all his people than from any great achievements.

He wrote no music or symphony, but shared the song of God's love; he painted no great masterpiece, but showed us we are all God's work of art; wrote no great book, but his words of comfort and love resound through all our joys and sorrows.

He has shown us what the Son of man is capable of when he lives in the shadows and light of God; and he has shown us what every man and woman can be guided towards.

Sitting at the right and left of Jesus - that's language he doesn't go for.

To live and grow, to suffer and struggle in love of self and others, is the way to glory in the sight of God, and this is the only glory worth our effort.
