The Women

Mary of Magdala, Joanna and Mary, the mother of James, watched it all. They watched the crucifixion of Jesus.

They has followed him, Galliean hopefulness suspended as they stood with his friends at a distance, and watched it all.

But they didn't give up these women. They followed when Joseph laid their Lord in his tomb, cut in rock.

They took note, they watched and they wondered, before leaving to rest, returning early on the first day of the wee that re-launched the world.

Mary of Magdala, Joanna and Mary, the mother of James, were there.

Surprised by the stone, dazzled by angels, terrified by enormity, re-born by the reality of resurrection, they were first in the telling.

The women of witness watched and then went, and were part of it all.
