A Blessing on the Countryside on a May Morning

The priest may bless the countryside, using these or similar words:

On this beautiful May morning, we look out over the countryside and we thank God for all he has made, for the whole of his creation.

We ask God to bless these hills and valleys, these rivers and streams, these mountains and the lakes, these houses and these farms.

Lord, bless all of us, the people of this countryside. Send your healing power among us - to banish the evils that would harm us. May your blessing remain among us to sustain us in love and peace, in caring and goodness,

Lord, on this May Day, we ask you to bless the efforts of those who produce food from the land. Let them know forward to a new season of fruitfulness and prosperity from their fields and their crops, their farms and their herds.

Lord, we remember the people of the past generations, who lived their and earned their livelihood among these hills and valleys and mountains and streams. Bless them with eternal life with you.

Lord, help us to preserve and enhance the beauty and healthfulness of this countryside that the past generations have handed on to us. Help us preserve the abundant variety of plant and animal life. Help us to cherish the pure water, the clean air, the fresh winds and the warm sunshine, and guide us in preserving this magnificent landscape that we have inherited.

Lord, as we grow in appreciation of our natural surroundings lead us to appreciate the wonder of your presence in our world, and surround us with your goodness and love and peace. We ask this through Christ our Lord. Amen.
