Resurrection - The Butterfly

A spider spun a silken thread And swung from grass to ground.
'I must find out the news,' he said, 'That's buzzing all around.'
The garden creatures big and small Were quiet as a mouse,
They saw a caterpillar crawl Into a tiny house.
'He is such a fool,' said the ladybird, as she polished up her nails.
'It's the silliest thing we've ever heard,' said a pair of solemn snails.
So all the creatures went away all thinking he was dead, until one bright and lovely day a little earthworm said,
'I see a crack in a little shell And someone moves inside. I see a head and wings as well. Come quick and see!' he cried.
'The caterpillar's back,' they said. Before their very eyes
A butterfly stepped out instead and smiled at their surprise.
